Turn The Page (Carpenter and Philly Novels) (Volume 1) Ken Behar

Sixty-year-old civil case lawyer Carpenter often finds himself exasperated with his colleague, Philomena “Philly” Piper. Half his age, Philly is opinionated, strong-willed, and stubborn—traits Carpenter recognizes in himself.

Turn the Page covers the civil cases that come Carpenter and Philly’s way in 2007. They collaborate in representing a high school sophomore fighting suspension because his journal refers to the school blowing up, a whistleblower who claims a medical practice is overbilling, and a mother who is sued for allegedly causing an accident by serving champagne to celebrating high school seniors.

Both lawyers must balance their hectic, busy caseloads with their personal lives. Carpenter is faced with the possibility that the love of his life, Connie, will take a two-year sabbatical to Africa. Philly deals with Raul, a computer troubleshooter, whose courtship methods are best described as unorthodox.

Their attempts to compartmentalize work and personal lives only meet with limited success. Being responsible for cases that change clients’ lives is a heavy burden that Philly struggles to carry. As for Carpenter, years of civil court experience have taught him one thing: no matter the outcome, no matter the consequences, when a case is finished a good lawyer turns the page and moves on.
