A Christian View of Divorce: According to the Teachings of the New Testament Donald W Shaner, Dorothy M. Peters

The purpose of this study is to present a Christian view of divorce in light of the teachings of the New Testament. It does not claim to be the Christian view, since throughout the history of Christianity numerous attitudes concerning divorce have been expressed.

The New Testament teachings themselves seem to indicate the early differences that arose in the primitive church. Moreover, to the present day there have been various interpretations regarding the content and meaning of the biblical texts. Churches and individual scholars have taken positions that range from the strict prohibition of divorce to the allowance of divorce and remarriage for a wide variety of reasons.
