Ian and Jane Garner are Harvest Bay's storybook couple: high school sweethearts now married for twenty years with four great kids and a beautiful home. But this storybook, like most, can't be judged by its cover. Ian works long hours at the business he built to provide for his family, unintentionally alienating his wife in the process. Feeling unappreciated and disrespected when Jane demands more of his time, he turns to an adult website and retreats to like his wounded pride in private. For over half of her life, Jane has fulfilled her role as Ian's wife, seldom receiving as much as she gives to the marriage. Left lonely and dying inside, the kindergarten teacher turns to her forgotten love of painting and a new friendship with a male coworker to revive the cold and dormant part of heart. As their marriage unravels, Ian and Jane begin to realize that to save their marriage, first they both need a Savior and that a threefold cord is not easily broken. But when a life or death situation occurs, it is too late for forgiveness, grace, and mercy to set them free to return to the love they once knew? Or will they continue to be held as The Heart's Hostage
